Social care for adults: the case of Worcestershire County Council

In this session, Rosa Morales (social worker, Worcestershire County Council) and Adrià Albareda (research associate, Vic University) present the state-of-the-art of adult social care in England by focusing on a particular case: Worcestershire County Council. England has extensive experience in the field of social care. However, it is in the midst of implementing a new Care Act (2014), which is affecting the way adult social care is organized and delivered. The speakers discuss the experience in England by analysing the case of Worcestershire County Council and the main implications of the new Care Act.
